FAU Head Football Coach Schnellenberger speaks to Orbis

Orbis, a nonprofit organization for young South Florida business professionals recently hosted the second part of its Speaking Series, featuring Florida Atlantic University (FAU) Head Football Coach Howard Schnellenberger.

The event was held at the Tom Oxley Athletic Center of FAU's Boca Raton campus. The evening began with a cocktail reception, followed by Schnellenberger sharing his thoughts about success with Orbis members, citing FAU's victory in New Orleans as an example.

"Orbis is grateful to Schnellenberger for taking time to speak at our event," said Michael Schimmel, a real-estate attorney at Gunster Yoakley and a co-founder and board member of Orbis. "Everyone in attendance was inspired by his presence. He is a legend in South Florida college football and is very inspirational.

A portion of the proceeds from the event will benefit

The American Cancer Society in honor of Schnellenberger's son Stephen, who recently died from a rare form of cancer.

"Orbis encourages charitable giving and generally incorporates a philanthropic component to each event," said David Scileppi, an attorney at Gunster Yoakley and a co-founder and board member of Orbis. "We all felt that the American Cancer Society would be the perfect charity for this event."
