

Society

Orbis Aviation Experience a success

Steve Mann, left, Alyssa Lovitt, Christopher Murray and Michael S. Schimmel

Orbis, a non-profit organization for young, South Florida business professionals, together with Riverwalk Trust and BACH (Benefactors Advancing Covenant House) recently joined forces to host an evening reception, “An Aviation Experience.” Taking place at the Museum of Discovery & Science, the event drew more than 150 individuals.

“The evening was a huge success,” noted Craig Moskowitz of Automatic Data Processing (ADP) and board member of Orbis. “The night featured hands on interactive aviation experiences that the crowd really enjoyed. But more importantly, we attracted new people who learned about Orbis and its networking opportunities.”

According to David C. Scileppi, a corporate and securities attorney at Gunster, Yoakley, & Stewart and co-founder of Orbis, the organization has emerged as one of the preeminent young professional groups in South Florida. “The growth of our organization has been remarkable. Events such as this, that bring entertainment and fun to business networking, is one of the elements that makes Orbis so unique.”

Orbis is a non-profit organization that represents a cross-section of the South Florida business community and is committed to offering a variety of opportunities for young professionals to develop their personal and business relationships while helping build an energetic South Florida.